“One of my greatest sources of inspiration has been exploring my own instrument, finding new sounds, discords, really anything that can evoke a new mood or association. This has certainly also influenced the way I listen to music and my interplay with other musicians. My collaboration with Øyvind and Stephan began in 2013, when they contributed to my first solo album, Blikkspor. Now, when the time was ripe for a new record, it felt natural to expand my collaboration with these two generous and uncompromising musicians, whom I have admired for a long time. Working together with these ‘sound hunters’ has definitively opened the doors to many new rooms for me and my music. Our backgrounds are very different, but with improvisation as a common platform we have tried to find a language, or a space, one could say, where all three of us can feel at home. Some of the material is based on my themes, but a lot of it was improvised in the studio. I hope we have succeeded in making a record that also opens up a space to the people who might listen to it.”
